Kalona, IA (July 29) – Steve Pfile of Freeport, Illinois began working with Miller Hybrids, Inc. on July 29. His career in the seed industry began in 1974 and includes time spent with four companies before he joined Miller Hybrids. He will be serving dealers and customers in a new territory in Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin.

“Miller Hybrids is a regional company that runs a large research effort which provides outstanding genetic options, while maintaining the herbicide and insect trait flexibility that many farmers desire” Steve explained. “I like the ability to talk directly with the owner and research director, Bob Miller, and to get solutions quickly to address the needs of my dealers and customers.”

Pfile also manages and operates a grain farm in Northern Illinois and uses the experience from his farm and the demonstration plots he plants to enhance his understanding of the products he represents. He appreciates that Miller Hybrids products already have a proven track record in Northern Illinois and that the Eastern Iowa research focus of Miller Hybrids translates nicely to his sales area.

“We are very pleased to have Steve join us to help expand Miller Hybrids’ presence in Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin,” remarked Miller Hybrids Sales Manager Chad Gillam. “His experience, contacts, integrity and the desire to maximize the profit per acre of our customers and prospects are assets we appreciate about Steve.”

Miller Hybrids, Inc. is a regional seed company started in 2005 in Eastern Iowa. The secret to the sustained rapid growth in sales by Miller Hybrids begins with an excellent portfolio of corn, soybeans and alfalfa. The core strength of Miller Hybrids, however, involves Miller Hybrids Seed Experts seeking to understand each customer’s fields and farming practices, so together with the customer they can properly position varieties that will increase the profit potential of each field. Because of their customers’ success, Miller Hybrids recently moved into their new headquarters and adopted the service mark ‘Come Grow With Us<sup>SM</sup>’.
